Physical Therapy Board, 2003     Pre-surgery physiotherapy and pain thresholds in patients with degenerative lumbar spine disorders Yvonne Lindbäck, 2018-08-27 Background Patients scheduled for spinal surgery often experience long duration of pain which may influence the pain regulation system function and health and have an impact on post surgery outcome Prehabilitation potentially augments functional capacity before surgery which may have beneficial effects after surgery Aim

The overall aim of the thesis is to study pre surgery physiotherapy and somatosensory function in patients with degenerative lumbar spine disorders and to explore the patients experiences of pre surgery physiotherapy Methods Somatosensory function was measured with quantitative sensory testing QST Pre surgery physiotherapy was evaluated with patient reported outcome measures n 197 Patients experiences of how symptoms are explained and their experiences of the influences on back related health after pre surgery physiotherapy were explored Results Half of the patients reported back or leg pain for more than 2 years On a group level the somatosensory profiles were within the reference range On an individual level an altered somatosensory profile was found in 23 105 patients these were older more often women and reported higher pain larger pain distribution and worse SF 36 MCS mental health component summary Patients with disc herniation more sensitive to pressure pain in the hand presurgery was associated with poorer function self efficacy anxiety and depression score pre surgery worse function self efficacy and leg pain 3 months post surgery and worse health related quality of life self efficacy depression score 1 year postsurgery The results for sensitivity for cold pain were similar except that it even was associated with poorer function and pain 1 year post surgery The pre surgery physiotherapy group had less back pain better function health self efficacy fear avoidance score depression score and physical activity level than the waiting list group after the pre surgery intervention The effects were small Both groups improved significantly after surgery with no differences between groups except that the higher physical activity level in the physiotherapy group remained at the 1 year follow up Only 58% of the patients reported a minimum of one visit for rehabilitation during the 1 year preceding the decision to undergo surgery Patients experienced that pre surgery physiotherapy had influenced symptoms physical function coping well being and social functioning to various degrees Pre surgery physiotherapy was experienced as a tool for reassurance and an opportunity to reflect about treatment and lifestyle The patients mainly used biomedical explanatory models based on image reports to explain their backrelated symptoms Both broader and more narrow as well as lack of explanations of symptoms emerged Further wanting and sometimes struggling to be wellinformed about symptoms and interventions were described Conclusions Being more sensitive to pressure and cold pain in the hand as a sign of widespread pain pre surgery was associated with poorer function pain and health at post surgery in patients with disc herniation Pre surgery physiotherapy decreased pain fear avoidance improved health related quality of life and it decreased the risk of a worsening in psychological well being before surgery The improvements were small and improvements after surgery were similar for both groups At the 1 year follow up the physiotherapy group still had a higher activity level than the waiting list group The pre surgery physiotherapy was well tolerated Patients reported experiences also illustrates the influence on function pain and health Patients experienced that pre surgery physiotherapy provided reassurance and gave time to reflect on treatments and lifestyle Symptoms were mainly described in line with a biomedical explanatory model Those using a broader explanation were confident that physiotherapy and self management could influence their back related symptoms A Comprehensive
