McDonald, 2011-11-01 Making Vancouver explores social relationships in Vancouver from 1863 to 1913 It considers how urbanization structured social boundaries among Burrard Inlet's increasingly large population and is premised on the belief that in studying social boundaries historians must abandon single category forms of analysis and build into their research strategies the capacity to explore complexity Robert McDonald thus traces the relationship between the two forms of identify class and status for the whole of Vancouver society The book starts with the years when settlement on Burrard Inlet centred around two lumber mills explores periods of elite dominance of city institutions and then of growing social and political conflict following the arrival of the railway examines the heightening of class tensions at the turn of the century charts economic growth during the boom years before the war and concludes with three chapters on the tripartite status hierarchy that emerged in concert with that of a class dichotomy It reveals a western city that was neither egalitarian nor closed to opportunity Vancouver up to the pre war crash of 1913 was open and dynamic The rapidity of growth easy access to resources narrow industrial base and influence of ethnicity and race softened the thrust towards class division inherent in capitalism Far more powerful in directing social relations was the quest for status creating a social structure that was no less hierarchical than that predicted by class theory but much more fluid The social boundary that separated the working class from others is revealed as a division that for much of the pre war boom period divided Vancouver society more fundamentally than the boundary separating labour from capital DK Top 10 Vancouver and Vancouver Island DK Travel,2024-05-02

The Transformation of Canada's Pacific Metropolis Thomas A. Hutton, Institute for Research on Public Policy, 1998 This volume documents the economic and socio cultural transformation of Vancouver over the last decade analyzing the city's distinctive growth trajectory It describes how Vancouver has undergone a complex series of demographic economic and socio cultural changes that have given the city a radically different profile as a gateway to the Pacific a multi cultural metropolis a preferred destination for Asian immigrants and an integral part of new regional entities such as the Cascadia ecological and economic zone In addition to Vancouver's deepening engagement with Asia Pacific markets and societies the chapters examine the restructuring of the city's economy and labour force the formation of new external linkages the changes in class community and metropolitan structures and the patterns of urban reconstruction The final chapter discusses the implications of the Vancouver experience for structural change and the post industrial city region

Houses for All Jill Wade, 1994-01-01 Houses for All is the story of the struggle for social housing in Vancouver between 1919 and 1950 It argues that however temporary or limited their achievements local activists played a significant role in the introduction implementation or continuation of many early national housing programs Ottawa's housing initiatives were not always unilateral actions in the development of the welfare state The drive for social housing in Vancouver complemented the tradition of housing activism that already existed in the United Kingdom and to a lesser degree in the United States
