Cascading of well behaved group codes of moderate size such as the Golay codes and some Hamming codes permits the generation of codes of large overall size which can be stepwise decoded using the exhaustive and convenient decoding algorithms of the component codes. Decoders for Hamming codes are well known. For the Golay 23 12 code an expedient and exhaustive algorithm requiring in the order of two matrix multiplications on the average for 23 digits is presented. This code permits correction of all errors of multiplicities 1 2 3. Procedures for listing all compatible quadruple errors in cascaded Golay codes are presented. An SDS 920 all purpose digital computer has been programmed to execute the Golay 23 12 decoding algorithm and to execute a statistical survey of 80 different implementations of the algorithm including computation of performance parameters.
