Big Ideas of Social Psychology: Essay Introduction

Social psychology studies have helped to build societal thinking about life. There are many ideological thoughts about people's behaviors. The different beliefs shape the way people do things. The paper would explain the three big ideas in social psychology and give reasons why they are the most interesting ones.

We Construct Our Social Reality

People have had historical differences (Myers, 2010). It is not possible for them to have the same kind of thinking over a particular issue. For instance, if one gives children a rope for the first time, some would tie to a tree (Zanna & Olson, 2013). Others would use it to jump while others would look for something to cut it into pieces.

The same applies to adults. When people come to a meeting, they are apparently trying to put their thoughts together to reach a decision. After deliberations, they come up with an agreeable decision that is acceptable across the board (Myers, 2010). It does not mean that all of them would accept the verdict. But their input makes it possible to arrive at a conclusion.

The reason for this choice is that it provides an avenue for amicable disagreements. It helps people to accommodate other people's views. People should, therefore, not become judgmental concerning their colleague's views.
