response has not been as strong as would have been expected given the size of the depreciation. More fundamental issues appear to be impeding the growth of the Canadian manufacturing sector. This study analyzes the structural factors behind export competitiveness by using unique Canadian data on exports which are disaggregated both by province and by product. Matching exports to similarly disaggregated data on R D, the capital stock and other supply side variables, we find that these variables significantly affect export growth beyond the impact of the exchange rate. In particular, investment in R D, capital infrastructure and vocational training improves innovation and production capacity. These results are robust to a factor augmented approach that controls for multicollinearity.

Southern China Marco R. Di Tommaso, Lauretta Rubini, Elisa Barbieri, 2013-05-07 By concentrating on one of the key locations of global manufacturing, this volume offers a contribution to contemporary industry studies. The rates of growth that have characterized the southern Guangdong province in the last three decades are unique even with respect to the more general and often cited Chinese experience. But what role have governments played in these decades of growth? What are the aims and tools of industrial policies promoted in this core location of contemporary manufacturing? And what are the implications of the Guangdong experience of growth for the international debate on contemporary industry? Referencing the international debate on industrial development, specialized Chinese academic literature, official government documents, statistics and in-depth fieldwork, this book offers a unique view on the complex set of long-term national and local government plans and policies that have gone hand in hand with the last three decades of impressive change in this highly industrialized region. In this framework, local industrial development policy, innovation policy and migration policy are carefully analyzed as three of the main strategic interventions selected by government authorities to promote the desired gradual structural change and technological upgrading in industry. This book will be of interest to students and scholars of Chinese studies, economics and business development policy and industrial policy. Furthermore, the volume presents stimulating material for both policy makers and entrepreneurs.

This impressive new edition builds and improves upon the popular style and structure of the original. With new data, improved pedagogy and coverage of all of the main developments in international finance over the last few years, this book will prove essential reading for students of economics and business.
