

Psychology 230 - Study Guide for Examination I

1. Be able to describe the major controversies in developmental psychology such as nature-nurture, continuity-discontinuity and universal vs context-specific development. Be able to identify examples of each of these concepts.
- Controversies in Developmental Psychology
  - Continuity versus Discontinuity
    - Is development smooth with quantitative progressions? (gradual growth)- Continuity
    - Is development stage- like with abrupt shifts in knowledge, personality and skills? - Discontinuity (example – terrible twos, knowledge and personality)
    - Most developmentalists see the interaction of these two as the most important factor now

BOTH ARE HAPPENING

- Controversies in Developmental Psych
    - Universal vs. Context-specific argument
      - Does everyone go through the same kinds of changes at about the same time? Is development universal?
- OR
- Are there differences in how we progress through development depending on our culture and the context with in which development occurs?

2. Be able to describe the normative (age-graded, history-graded) and non-normative influences on development.

Development is viewed in an historic context

- Normative- age-graded influence

(example – puberty, learning how to walk)

- Normative- history-graded influences

(example – economics, military, diseases, natural disasters)

- Non-normative influences

(example – traumatic divorce, mental health issues, injuries)

3. Be familiar with the assumptions of a lifespan developmental approach.

- What is lifespan development?
  - The study of systematic changes (or predictable changes) in physical, mental, and behavioral characteristics that occur between conception and death.
  - We study 2 aspects of these changes:
    - How people change over time (description)
    - What factors produce these changes (explanation for changes)

What's so important about description?

- When you need to see how someone is progressing
- To decide what you need to do to better something
- A way to measure
- A way to study

- Four assumptions in a life-span

- Perspective to Development
  1. Development is a life-long process
    - at all age periods significant changes take place
