

Hypothesis for West Region

For this project you will choose one region and perform a hypothesis test for that region. The following data is for the West: Washington. Click to a following page for Southwest, Midwest, Southeast, and Northeast data.

We are looking to answer the following question. Has the average winter temperature for 2022 been colder than the past 10 winters?

Our hypothesis is going to be that the average winter temperature has been colder this winter. Test the claim at a 5% level of significance.

Note: We defined winter weather as January, February, and March. For consistency, consider the "average" temperature in Fahrenheit from each January, February, and March from 2011-2021 for your "Home State". I have included the average winter temperatures for 5 states where each state represents the *5 regions of the lower Continental U.S.

Use the following chart to calculate the μ (the population average) for the given data set for the West
Washington

Year	Jan	Feb	Mar
2011	43	20	46
2012	40	44	44
