The Grammar of the Machine Edward Stevens, 1995-01-01 During the late eighteenth and early nineteenth centuries the American economy moved toward a manufacturing base and mass production creating a demand for a literacy that encompassed not only the traditional alphabetic form of expression but also scientific and mathematical notation and spatial and graphic representation How did the world of learning respond to this demand What kinds of educational institutions teachers textbooks and patterns of instruction emerged Edward Stevens Jr describes the important technological changes that took place in antebellum America and the challenges they posed for education Investigating the instruction curricula and textbooks used in the common schools in the mechanics institutes and specifically at the Troy Female Seminary and the Rensselaer School in upstate New York he demonstrates how advocates of technical literacy attempted to teach new skills Stevens shows that the tensions between the liberal and the vocational between a culture of print and a nonverbal culture of experience persisted in technical education through the first half of the nineteenth century but were resolved temporarily by a common moral vision readers how the control and regulation of color shaped the social contours of modern America and redefined the way we see the world
