Gilmore, J., & Rowling, C. M. Lighting the Beacon: Presidential Discourse, American Exceptionalism, and Public Diplomacy in Global Contexts. Presidential Studies Quarterly.

Jason Gilmore is an Assistant Professor of Global Communication at Utah State University. His research program focuses on the strategic creation, dissemination, and effects of national and international ideas—such as American exceptionalism and anti-Americanism—that are regularly communicated within and across national and cultural boundaries.

Charles M. Rowling is an Associate Professor of Political Science at the University of Nebraska-Kearney. His research focuses on the role of political communication, news coverage, and public opinion in U.S. foreign policy.

Abstract

The idea of American exceptionalism has shaped American politics and captivated audiences for centuries. This study examines the global contexts in which U.S. presidents have invoked the idea of American exceptionalism when addressing foreign audiences since the end of World War II. Our results reveal: (a) differences in how U.S. presidents invoke American exceptionalism when speaking to a global audience (e.g. the United Nations) versus more localized, foreign audiences within individual states; (b) significant variation regarding which countries are more likely to be targets of American exceptionalism in U.S. presidential discourse; and (c) the profound impact that the end of the Cold War had on these dynamics.
