Abstract—The authors examined the effects of a 6-week training program on the performance of 10 female triathletes. The subjects were divided into two groups: control ($n = 5$) and experimental ($n = 5$). The experimental group underwent a 6-week training program consisting of three sessions per week. The control group did not undergo any training. The results showed that the experimental group had significantly higher values for maximum oxygen consumption ($V_{O_{2max}}$) and maximum power output (P_{max}) compared to the control group at the end of the 6-week period. These findings suggest that the training program was effective in improving aerobic and anaerobic capacity in female triathletes.
