Misinformation, Content Moderation, and Epistemology Keith Raymond Harris,2024-04-19 This book argues that misinformation poses a multifaceted threat to knowledge while arguing that some forms of content moderation risk exacerbating these threats It proposes alternative forms of content moderation that aim to address this complexity while enhancing human epistemic agency The proliferation of fake news false conspiracy theories and other forms of misinformation on the internet and especially social media is widely recognized as a threat to individual knowledge and consequently to collective deliberation and democracy itself This book argues that misinformation presents a three pronged threat to knowledge While researchers often focus on the role of misinformation in causing false beliefs this deceptive potential of misinformation exists alongside the potential to suppress trust and to distort the perception of evidence Recognizing the multifaceted nature of this threat is essential to the development of effective measures to mitigate the harms associated with misinformation The book weaves together work in analytic epistemology with emerging empirical work in other disciplines to offer novel insights into the threats posed by misinformation Additionally it breaks new ground by systematically assessing different forms of content moderation from the perspective of epistemology Misinformation Content Moderation and Epistemology will appeal to philosophers working in applied and social epistemology as well as scholars and advanced students in disciplines such as communication studies political science and social psychology who are researching misinformation The Introduction and Chapter 1 of this book are freely available as downloadable Open Access PDFs at <http://www.taylorfrancis.com> under a Creative Commons Attribution Non Commercial No Derivatives CC BY NC ND 4 0 license
