1. The first step in the process of identifying a problem is to recognize that a problem exists. This involves gathering information about the situation and identifying the specific issue that needs to be addressed.

2. Once a problem has been identified, the next step is to define the problem clearly. This involves stating the problem in a concise and specific manner, identifying the scope of the problem, and determining the goals that need to be achieved.

3. The third step in the process is to generate potential solutions. This involves brainstorming ideas and considering different approaches to solving the problem. It is important to consider a wide range of options and to evaluate the potential benefits and drawbacks of each solution.

4. The fourth step is to select a solution. This involves evaluating the potential solutions and choosing the one that is most likely to be effective. This decision should be based on a careful analysis of the pros and cons of each solution and on the resources available to implement the solution.

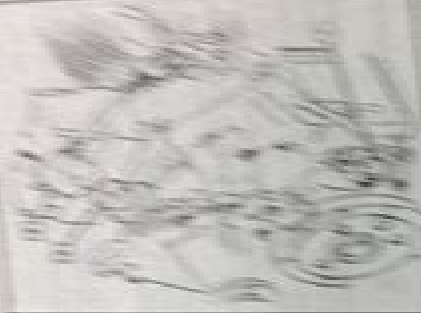

5. The final step in the process is to implement the solution. This involves putting the chosen solution into action and monitoring its progress. It is important to stay flexible and to be prepared to make adjustments as needed.

Under 400 ppm, the RDM will start injecting fuel (acetone) as soon as the CV module receives a run signal, preheats the spark and produces a reference signal for the RDM to calculate the fuel injection. The CV module controls the spark plug timing. After 400 ppm, the RDM stops during this period. After 450 ppm, the RDM starts FuelStart Spark timing (FST) and changes its role of fuel injection to preheating, providing a run time to the fuel.
