

1. When a rod is held with nylon, a PVC rod gives electrons a static charge. The rod has been charged by static. Even though the rod is being brought near, the rod keeps its charge. What is responsible for this property of substances?

2. When the rod touches the metal sphere, the charge moves to the ball. What happens electrically static when the rod touches and separates as far as possible. In the first diagram, draw an arrow showing the direction the electrons move. When the rod is removed, the sphere is left with a static charge. The process is charging, static and the sphere is charged. In the second diagram, draw the rod's charge on the sphere.

3. The following series shows a positive rod being charged. In each case, draw the arrangement that charge distribution has had.

4. Charging a static charge without touching is called induction. The side of the object closest to the charging distribution is charged that is (like same as, opposite) than the charging rod. The process is charging, static.

5. Draw the lines on the electrostatic lines, and use a positive and a negative charge to show the charge distribution in each case.
