Blinding as a Solution to Bias Christopher T Robertson,Aaron S Kesselheim,2016-01-30 What information should jurors have during court proceedings to render a just decision Should politicians know who is donating money to their campaigns Will scientists draw biased conclusions about drug efficacy when they know more about the patient or study population The potential for bias in decision making by physicians lawyers politicians and scientists has been recognized for hundreds of years and drawn attention from media and scholars seeking to understand the role that conflicts of interests and other psychological processes play However commonly proposed solutions to biased decision making such as transparency disclosing conflicts or exclusion avoiding conflicts do not directly solve the underlying problem of bias and may have unintended consequences Robertson and Kesselheim bring together a renowned group of interdisciplinary scholars to consider another way to reduce the risk of biased decision making blinding What are the advantages and limitations of blinding How can we quantify the biases in unblinded research Can we develop new ways to blind decision makers What are the ethical problems with withholding information from decision makers in the course of blinding How can blinding be adapted to legal and scientific procedures and in institutions not previously open to this approach Fundamentally these sorts of questions about who needs to know what open new doors of inquiry for the design of scientific research studies regulatory institutions and courts The volume surveys the theory practice and future of blinding drawing upon leading authors with a diverse range of methodologies and areas of expertise including forensic sciences medicine law philosophy economics psychology sociology and statistics Introduces readers to the primary policy issue this book seeks to address biased decision making Provides a focus on blinding as a solution to bias which has applicability in many domains Traces the development of blinding as a solution to bias and explores the different ways blinding has been employed Includes case studies to explore particular uses of blinding for statisticians radiologists and fingerprint examiners and whether the jurors and judges who rely upon them will value and understand blinding

Transforming Public Services by Design Sabine Junginger, 2016-12-01 For policy makers and policy implementers design challenges abound Every design challenge presents an opportunity for change and transformation To get from policy intent to policy outcome however is not a straightforward journey It involves people and services as much as it involves policies and organizations Of all organizations perhaps government agencies are perceived to be the least likely to change They are embedded in enormous bureaucratic structures that have grown over decades if not centuries In effect many people have given up hope that such an institution can ever change its ways of doing business And yet from a human centered design perspective they present a fabulous challenge Designed by people for people they have a mandate to be citizen centered but they often fall short of this goal If human centered design can make a difference in this organizational context it is likely to have an equal or greater impact on an organization that shows more flexibility for example one that is smaller in size and less entangled in legal or political frameworks Transforming Public Services by Design offers a human centered design perspective on policies organizations and services Three design projects by large scale government agencies illustrate the implications for organizations and the people involved in designing public services the Tax Forms Simplification Project by the Internal Revenue Service 1978 1983 the Domestic Mail Manual Transformation Project by the United States Postal Service 2001 2005 and the Integrated Tax Design Project by the Australian Tax Office These case studies offer a unique demonstration of the role of human centered design in policy context This book aims to support designers and managers of all backgrounds who want to know more about reorienting policies organizations and services around people Open
