Exercises: The Importance of Science

Chapter 1: Introduction and Overview

Section 1: Introduction

1. a. Is there a relationship between science and technology in a general sense or specifically in the transportation field?
2. a. Science represents that which provides a systematic and rigorous process with which to test an educated hypothesis (i.e. theory) against reality. What makes science different from other methods of knowledge acquisition is that in science-based science has only one true path to the truth. Other methods will attempt to obtain truth in a subjective manner. What is science fundamentally concerned with? Truthful and about the world?
3. a. Hypothesis generation is inherently a creative process. In conducting the test, a hypothesis is either confirmed or rejected. Hypothesis testing requires a sample which is representative of a total which has some population parameter that the tested sample represents. Science is based on hypothesis.
