juxtaposing their styles and approaches to explore one of the central policy dilemmas of our day the integration of immigrants not all of them legal and their children into American society and economy while critiquing the role of media and scholarly observers who shape our understanding of immigration as well Michael Jones Correa Professor of Government Cornell University Turning the Soul Sophie Haroutunian-Gordon, 1991-04-21 Is our nation's educational system faltering in part because it strives to teach students predetermined right answers to questions In Turning the Soul Sophie Haroutunian Gordon offers an alternative to methods advocated by conventional educational practice By guiding the reader back and forth between two high school classes discussing Shakespeare's Romeo and Juliet she gracefully introduces the alternative approach to education interpretive discussion One class located in a private racially integrated urban school has had many conversations about the meaning of books The second group less advantaged students in a largely black urban school has not The reader watches as students in each group begin to draw upon experiences in their personal lives to speculate about events in the play The students assist one another with the interpretation of complex passages pose queries that help sustain the conversation and struggle to get Shakespeare right Though the teachers suffer moments of intense frustration they are rewarded by seeing their students learn to engage in meaningful exchange Because Turning the Soul draws on actual classroom conversations it presents the range of difficulties that one encounters in interpretive discussion The book describes the assumptions about learning that the use of such discussion in the classroom presupposes and it offers a theoretical perspective from which to view the changes in both students and teachers The Idea of Difficulty in Literature Alan Carroll Purves, 1991-01-01 This book redefines the nature of textual difficulty in literature and shows the implications of the new definition for teachers at all levels of education Contrary to the traditional use of grade levels or readability formulae the authors redefine difficulty in terms of readers and the texts they meet They base their arguments on contemporary linguistic theory on historical and comparative studies of criticism on literary theory about readers and texts on post Freudian psychology on empirical research concerning the nature of reading literature and on studies of classrooms curricula and testing What emerges is a coherent work that builds a case for seeing difficulty in literature as a human phenomenon more than a textual one
