A Safer Place for Patients Great Britain: National Audit Office, 2005-11-03 The Department of Health estimates that one in ten patients admitted to NHS hospitals will be unintentionally harmed a rate similar to other developed countries due to incidents such as an injury from a fall medication errors equipment related incidents record documentation errors and hospital acquired infections About half of such incidents could have been avoided if lessons from previous incidents had been learned This NAO report examines the progress being made in the NHS to improve the patient safety culture to encourage incident reporting and to learn lessons for the future The report finds that most trusts have developed a predominantly open and fair reporting culture at the local level driven largely by the Department of Health's clinical governance initiative and more effective risk management systems. However, a blame culture still exists in some trusts and there have been delays in establishing an effective national reporting system.
