The Paisley magazine Vol 1 , Writing Indian Nations Maureen Konkle, 2005-11-16 In the early years of the republic the United States government negotiated with Indian nations because it could not afford protracted wars politically militarily or economically Maureen Konkle argues that by depending on treaties which rest on the equal standing of all signatories Europeans in North America institutionalized a paradox the very documents through which they sought to dispossess Native peoples in fact conceded Native autonomy As the United States used coerced treaties to remove Native peoples from their lands a group of Cherokee Pequot Ojibwe Tuscarora and Seneca writers spoke out With history polemic and personal narrative these writers countered widespread misrepresentations about Native peoples supposedly primitive nature their inherent inability to form governments and their impending disappearance Furthermore they contended that arguments about racial difference merely justified oppression and dispossession deriding these arguments as willful attempts to evade the true meanings and implications of the treaties the writers insisted on recognition of Native peoples political autonomy and human equality Konkle demonstrates that these struggles over the meaning of U S Native treaties in the early nineteenth century led to the emergence of the first substantial body of Native writing in English and as she shows the effects of the struggle over the political status of Native peoples remain embedded in contemporary scholarship
