Institutional limits to land governance reform Resnick, Danielle, Okumo, Austen, 2016-12-09 Over the last decade land governance has become a major priority for the development community 1 A particular focus has been on sub Saharan Africa due to the recognized paradox of high levels of land availability and low productivity in the region see Deininger et al 2012 While poor land governance systems have long been identified as a key reason for this disjuncture the relatively recent large scale impetus to improve land governance emerged from the inclusion of land management in 2009 as one of the four pillars under the African Union's Comprehensive Africa Agriculture Development Program CAADP Subsequently in the wake of the G 8's launch of the New Alliance for Food Security and Nutrition in 2012 many international initiatives have emerged to promote better land governance These include the African Union's Land Policy Initiative AULPI and the World Bank's Land Governance Assessment Framework LGAF At the national level in Africa land registration and land titling are the most common approaches to reform Sikor and Mller 2009 with governments selecting among a broad spectrum of modalities to pilot These include rural land use plans in some francophone countries e g Benin Burkina Faso and Cte d'Ivoire systematic land tenure regularization Ethiopia Madagascar Rwanda and communal land demarcation and registration e g Ghana Mozambique Tanzania see Byamugisha 2013

Practical Panarchy for Adaptive Water Governance Barbara Cosens, Lance Gunderson, 2018-04-18 This book presents the results of an interdisciplinary project that examined how law policy and ecological dynamics influence the governance of regional scale water based social ecological systems in the United States and Australia The volume explores the obstacles and opportunities for governance that is capable of management adaptation and transformation in these regional social ecological systems as they respond to accelerating environmental change With the onset of the Anthropocene global and regional changes in biophysical inputs to these systems will challenge their capacity to respond while maintaining functions of water supply flood control hydropower production water quality and biodiversity Governance lies at the heart of the capacity of these systems to meet these challenges Assessment of water basins in the United States and Australia indicates that state centric governance of these complex and dynamic social environmental systems is evolving to a more complex diverse and complex array public and private arrangements In this process three challenges emerge for water governance to become adaptive to environmental change First is the need for legal reform to remove barriers to adaptive governance by authorizing government agencies to prepare for windows of opportunity through adaptive planning and to institutionalize the results of innovative solutions that arise once a window opens Second is the need for legal reform to give government agencies the authority to facilitate and participate in adaptive management and governance This must be accompanied by parallel legal reform to assure that engagement of private and economic actors and the increase in governmental flexibility does not destabilize basin economies or come at the expense of legitimacy accountability equity and justice Third development of means to continually assess thresholds and resilience of social ecological systems and the adaptive capacity of their current governance to structure actions at multiple scales The massive investment in water infrastructure on the river basins studied has improved the agricultural urban and economic sectors largely at the cost of other social and environmental values Today the infrastructure is aging and in need of substantial investment for those benefits to continue and adapt to ongoing environmental changes The renewal of institutions and heavily engineered water systems also presents the opportunity to modernize these systems to address inequity and align with the values and objectives of the 21st century Creative approaches are needed to transform and modernize water governance that increases the capacity of these water based social ecological systems to innovate adapt and learn will provide the tools needed to navigate an uncertain future

Gender and the Global Land Grab Andrea M. Collins, 2024-06-15 Since the year 2000 millions of hectares of land in the Global South have been acquired by foreign investors for large scale agricultural projects displacing and disrupting rural communities Women are especially disadvantaged by the global land grab they are less likely to inherit control or make decisions over land but often need land to support themselves their families and their communities While international organizations have developed global guidelines to improve land governance tensions still run high as the current policies fall short Gender and the Global Land Grab introduces a feminist conceptual framework to analyze land governance policy around the world Andrea Collins shows how gender norms biases and expectations shape land politics at different levels of governance Drawing on examples from sub Saharan Africa and with an in depth case study of land politics in Tanzania the book assesses guidelines developed by institutions such as the Food and Agriculture Organization of the United Nations and the World Bank to highlight essential considerations for developing and implementing gender sensitive policy Illustrating how gender shapes resource policy across all levels of political activity Gender and the Global Land Grab provides valuable tools for transforming global policymaking
