National Bureau of Standards,1934 National Bureau of Standards Miscellaneous Publication ,1966 Handbook of Mixed Methods in Social & Behavioral Research Abbas Tashakkori,Charles Teddlie,2003 The Handbook contains a gold mine of articles by leading scholars on what has come to be known as the third methodological movement in social research Aimed at surveying the differing viewpoints and disciplinary approaches of mixed methods this breakthrough book examines mixed methods from the research enterprise to paradigmatic issues to application The book also discusses the strengths and weaknesses of mixed methods designs and provides an array of specific examples in a variety of disciplines from psychology to nursing The book closes with a brief section on how to teach and perform collaborative research using a mixed methods research design Written so that it can be used either as a pedagogical tool or as a reference for researchers the book is rich in examples and includes a glossary easy to follow diagrams and tables to help readers become more familiar with the language and controversies in this evolving area Seed certification and maize, rice and cowpea productivity in Nigeria: An insight based on nationally representative farm household data and seed company location data Hiroyuki, Takeshima,Abdoulaye, Tahirou,Andam, Kwaw S.,Edeh, Hyacinth O.,Fasoranti, Adetunji,Haile, Beliyu,Kumar, P. Lava,Nwagboso, Chibuzo,Ragasa, Catherine,Spielman, David J.,Wossen, Tesfamichael,2022-12-15 Despite the potential importance of seed quality to agricultural productivity growth many governments in sub Saharan Africa lack the capacity to expand quality assurance systems even where there is expressed interest This study aims to evidence the value of quality assurance systems with an analysis of efforts to produce and distribute certified seed in Nigeria We assess the associations between quantities of certified seeds produced and spatial variations in production locations proxied by headquarter locations of seed companies producing certified seeds on the one hand with spatial variations in the use of certified seed yields and output at the farm level on the other hand Our analysis covers three crops that are important to food security in Nigeria maize rice and cowpea Our analysis integrates information on seed quantities produced and locations of seed companies with nationally representative panel data from a survey of farm households and spatially explicit rainfall and temperature data We find a positive relationship between certified seed production in proximity to farm households and farm level use of certified seeds yields and output although this effect is diminishing at the margin These diminishing marginal effects may be partly due to two factors First the yield gains from certified seeds tend to vary considerably within each state suggesting that either quality issues persist in the seed supply chain or farmers are not using complementary inputs or appropriate management techniques when using quality seed Second it may be that as certified seed becomes more available to farmers its use spreads from higher return farms to lower return farms thereby diminishing the gains on the extensive margin Although more rigorous assessments of causal effects and cost effectiveness are needed to validate these findings these results are consistent with the hypothesis that there are diminishing returns to seed quality assurance Policymakers regulators and seed providers may benefit from identifying optimal crop specific target quantities or rates for certified seed production rather than aiming for certification of all seed produced in a market Research in Education ,1970 Nigerian Journal of Science and Educational Research ,2007
