At the Hour of Tea Paul Sietsema, 2014 Tir du site Internet de Rite Editions Paul Sietsema's work in film and painting addresses the objects and systems of cultural production tracing the circuits of proliferation and consumption that allow these objects to be taken up into history The artist's book At the hour of tea has been constructed from a collection of stills from his most recent 16mm film of the same title A filmic space is developed within the pages of the book moving through and layering the film's imagery via a system of cut portals and transparent screen like pages The film presents a sequence of tableaux of objects common to the desktop or study Sietsema employs a language of clichéd collectible objects Roman glass coins minor antiquities and the like to invoke the idea of a salon or space of contemplation as a parallel to the contemporary studio and the idea of a kind of leisure based consumptive creativity more and more shared by present day producers and consumers of culture Drawing on the design idea of skeuomorphism common in modern computer interfaces Sietsema fills his tableaux with now outmoded items that still live on as mere icons of their former functions

Transmedium Garrett Stewart, 2018-01-26 If you attend a contemporary art exhibition today you're unlikely to see much traditional painting or sculpture Indeed artists today are preoccupied with what happens when you leave behind assumptions about particular media such as painting or woodcuts and instead focus on collisions between them and the new forms and ideas that those collisions generate Garrett Stewart in Transmedium dubs this new approach Conceptualism 2.0 an allusion in part to the computer images that are so often addressed by these works A successor to 1960s Conceptualism which posited that a material medium was unnecessary to the making of art Conceptualism 2.0 features artworks that are transmedial that place the aesthetic experience itself deliberately at the boundary between often incommensurable media The result Stewart shows is art whose forced convergences break open new possibilities that are wholly surprising intellectually enlightening and often uncanny
