

Level 5 Diploma - FACT SHEET

ABMA Education is an awarding organisation based in the UK that is recognised by Ofqual, as well as many government accreditation bodies worldwide. It was established in the late 1990's in London with the aim to provide qualifications in a number of sectors for learners looking to turn their career aspirations into job success.

ABMA Education's approach to learning is different, as they work tirelessly to bridge the gap between education and employment by working closely with employers, education experts and their recognised centres to include the most relevant content and up-to-date skills in their qualifications. It's not just what you learn, but how you learn, that puts ABMA Education learners at the forefront of industry.

The main aims of the ABMA qualifications in Computing and Information Systems (CIS) are to:

- Prepare students for a range of technical, professional and management career disciplines in Computing and Information Systems by providing specialised studies which are directly relevant to individual occupations and professions in which students are currently working or in which they intend to seek employment.
- Enable students to make an immediate contribution in employment in the IT sector.
- Provide students with flexibility, knowledge, skills, understanding and motivation as a basis for progression to graduate and postgraduate studies.
- Develop a range of skills and techniques, personal qualities and attitudes essential for successful performance in working life.

Progression

Upon successful completion of Computing and Information Systems (CIS) Level 5 Diploma, graduates of the ABMA CIS programme gain direct access to the final year of the University of Greenwich's BSc in Computing (1 year in duration) offered at SBCS, Champs Fleurs and San Fernando campuses.
