Geer,2008-07-29 Americans tend to see negative campaign ads as just that negative Pundits journalists voters and scholars frequently complain that such ads undermine elections and even democratic government itself But John G Geer here takes the opposite stance arguing that when political candidates attack each other raising doubts about each other s views and qualifications voters and the democratic process benefit In Defense of Negativity Geer s study of negative advertising in presidential campaigns from 1960 to 2004 asserts that the proliferating attack ads are far more likely than positive ads to focus on salient political issues rather than politicians personal characteristics Accordingly the ads enrich the democratic process providing voters with relevant and substantial information before they head to the polls An important and timely contribution to American political discourse In Defense of Negativity concludes that if we want campaigns to grapple with relevant issues and address real problems negative ads just might be the solution
