The schematic diagram illustrates the experimental setup. It includes a power source (battery) connected to a motor. The motor is linked to a series of components: a pressure sensor, a flowmeter, and a pump. The pump is connected to a network of pipes that lead to various measurement points, including a pressure sensor and a flowmeter. The system is controlled by a computer, which is connected to the sensors and the pump. The diagram also shows a control panel with buttons and a display screen.
