- What's the deal with the "new" Star Trek?

As mentioned above, the 1994 report contains two tables of results on the relative frequency of occurrence of the strategies that students use when solving problems. Table 1 shows, for example, that 60% of the students used the strategy of "drawing a picture" when solving problems. Table 2 shows the relative frequency of occurrence of the strategies used by students when solving problems. The results show that the most frequently used strategy is "drawing a picture" (60%). The next most frequently used strategy is "using a formula" (40%). The results also show that the least frequently used strategy is "using a formula" (40%).
