Figure 1 consists of five panels, each representing a different number of trials (10, 20, 30, 40, and 50). The y-axis for all panels is 'Number of correct responses' ranging from 0 to 100. The x-axis is 'Number of trials' ranging from 0 to 100. Each panel shows a curve that starts at (0,0) and increases towards 100 as the number of trials increases. The curves are concave down, indicating that the rate of increase in correct responses slows down as the number of trials increases. The curves for different trial counts are very close to each other, suggesting that the effect of the number of trials on the number of correct responses is relatively small for the range of trials shown.
