Technology CAD Systems Franz Fasching, Stefan Halama, Siegfried Selberherr, 2012-12-06 As the cost of developing new semiconductor technology at ever higher bit gate densities continues to grow the value of using accurate TCAD simulation tools for design and development becomes more and more of a necessity to compete in today's business. The ability to tradeoff wafer starts in an advanced piloting facility for simulation analysis and optimization utilizing a virtual fab SW tool set is a clear economical asset for any semiconductor development company. Consequently development of more sophisticated accurate physics based and easy to use device and process modeling tools will receive continuing attention over the coming years. The cost of maintaining and paying for one's own internal modeling tool development effort however has caused many semiconductor development companies to consider replacing some or all of their internal tool development effort with the purchase of vendor modeling tools. While some notably larger companies have insisted on maintaining their own internal modeling tool development organization others have elected to depend totally on the tools offered by the TCAD vendors and have consequently reduced their modeling staffs to a bare minimal support function. Others are seeking to combine the best of their internally developed tool suite with robust proven tools provided by the vendors hoping to achieve a certain synergy as well as savings through this approach. In the following sections we describe IBM's internally developed suite of TCAD modeling tools and show several applications of the use of these tools.

Publications have consistently been released on a yearly basis with a brief interruption between 1938 and 1946. These publications serve as a key reference point for best practices and were initially reserved for internal use to maximise LR's competitive advantage. Today the LRTA takes a fresh approach focusing on collaboration by combining professional expertise from across LRF Group to ensure a frequent output of fresh perspectives and relevant content. The LRTA has evolved into a Group wide initiative that identifies, captures and shares knowledge spanning various business streams and functions. To support this modern approach the LRTA has adopted a new structure featuring representatives and senior governance across the business streams and the LR Foundation. The Lloyd's Register Technical Association Papers should be seen as historical documents representing earlier viewpoints and are not reflective of current thinking and perspectives by the current LR Technical Association.
