

Teen Drug Abuse

According to Kaminer & Bukstein (2008), there are copious causes of drug misuse among teenagers, and each cause has the potential to develop to a habit of excessive drug consumption. The drugs commonly abused by teenagers include cigarettes, alcohol and medicinal drugs, which they may obtain from the family stock of drugs or other sources. There are circumstances that act as risk factors for drug abuse among teenagers, which means that any teenager who exploits those risk factors will have a higher chance of abusing alcohol and other drugs.

Causes of Drug Abuse among Teenagers

Poor or inadequate parental supervision remains the chief cause of drug abuse among teenagers. Parents who leave their children without supervision for a whole day give them a chance to gain exposure to drugs (Aarseth, 2011). The same happens to teenagers who have the liberty of coming home any time they want or leaving at their own pleasure. Such teenagers get an opportunity to interact with drug abusers in the street. Alcohol and cigarettes are the favorite drugs for many teenagers, but teenagers cannot obtain these substances easily unless an adult sells to them (Siegel & Welsh, 2010). Therefore, parents should take keen interest in how the children spend their time and the people that the children befriend. Parents who

Teenage Drug Use United States. General Accounting Office, 1991 The study reported in this document is a follow up to earlier reviews of drugs and other youth problems It addressed the current status of and the recent trends in teenage drug use pregnancy and dropping out of school and the post 1987 research about the relationship between teenage drug use and either pregnancy or dropping out Statistics from public and private agencies were evaluated to describe trends in basic rates of these behaviors Although the data on teenage drug use displayed a downward trend reporting problems and estimating errors hindered their interpretation It seems unlikely that actual drug use has risen between 1979 and 1988 among youths overall or among individual racial or ethnic groups The 1985 data on teenage pregnancy indicated large disparities in the pregnancy birth and abortion rates for women 15 to 19 years of age while nonWhite and Hispanic teenagers appeared much more likely to become pregnant Research on dropouts indicated that teenagers were leaving school less frequently than in the past Also Black students had substantially decreased the gap between their dropout rates and those of White students Hispanics and Native Americans continued to drop out of school at rates considerably higher than those of White or Black students

Handbook of Drug Abuse Prevention Zili Sloboda,William J. Bukoski,2007-08-06 There are a number of reasons why this book is important First there is no one source that summarizes what we know about the prevention of substance abuse from the research field so the book serves as a repository of accumulated knowledge on prevention theory intervention design and development and prevention research methodology Second as an evolving field prevention science has only begun to assert itself in both the arenas of practice and policy The formation of the Society for Prevention Research in 1991 was the first recognition that a science of prevention existed and required a separate forum to present the rapidly growing content of the field for discussion and review Finally there is a need to establish a baseline a reference point against which progress in the field of prevention science can be assessed This book serves all of these purposes The idea for this book grew from the observation in the early 1990s that after decades of attempts to develop effective interventions to prevent drug use among children and adolescents in the United States that we were finally having success particularly in addressing the initiation of use These successes are the result of research that has provided a better understanding of the factors and processes associated with the onset of substance use
