The study takes an ecological approach, examining the ways the environment of the family (parenting practices, family structure, etc.)

This study found evidence of a positive association between the number of children in the household and the number of children who are not attending school. However, the results also suggest that the number of children in the household is not a significant predictor of the number of children who are attending school. This finding is consistent with the findings of other studies that have found that the number of children in the household is not a significant predictor of the number of children who are attending school.
