Boeing plan: two 737s per day

A RECORD OUTPUT

Boeing plant may require hundreds of new workers

BY DOMINIC LATER

To meet booming demand for single-aisle jets worldwide, Boeing announced Wednesday that it plans to step up production of its Boeing 737 to 42 planes per month by the first half of 2014.

That's an unprecedented production rate for a Boeing aircraft — an average of two 737s each workday and nearly 500 in a year.

If all goes according to plan with the 737 rate hike, Boeing's total annual aircraft production in 2014 would reach about 770 jets.

Last year Boeing built 462 jets. The historical peak production was in 1999, when Boeing's Puget Sound-area factories rolled out 542 airplanes.

The 737 program currently produces 33.5 airplanes per month. Boeing had previously announced a plan to go to 35 per month in early 2013, then 36 per month in spring 2013.

In addition, a military version of the 737 for the U.S.

Navy, the P-8, will roll out from a separate line at a rate of up to two per month within a few years.

The increased output of commercial 737s likely will require hundreds of new workers at Renton, where Boeing employs about 10,000.

The plant up demand from aircraft is driven by increased profitability in the industry, coupled with a need to replace older jets with more fuel-efficient airplanes because of rising oil prices.

Boeing has steadily improved the fuel efficiency of the 737 over the years. Performance tweaks to the engines and airplanes delivered beginning next month should improve fuel efficiency by another 2 percent, the company said.

Boeing's supply chain can keep up with the hectic manufacturing pace ahead, 737 Program vice president

Beverly Wyne said in a statement.

In 1997, Boeing raised 737 production rates in Renton to 30 per month, from six, and aimed to go higher. The supply chain strained and the assembly lines ground to a halt for a month. Delivery was delayed for more than a year and Boeing lost billions of dollars.

Avoiding a similar disaster with suppliers this time is a

SUV with GPS takes 3 for ride into water

WOMEN VISITING AREA FROM MEXICO

Drivers must use device carefully, experts say

BY JESSIE VAN DER KAM

Seattle Times staff reporter

When three women visiting the Seattle area took a wrong turn following a GPS early Monday morning, they ended up in Mercer Slough. But they're not the first GPS users to get confused and end up stuck, or worse.

From 2006 to 2010, there were 623 collisions, two of them fatal, reported in Washington state in which an electronic device — either a phone or a navigation system — such as a GPS or computer, contributed to the crash, according to the state Department of Transportation.

And that doesn't take into account all of the people who ended up somewhere other than their intended destination.

The women who went into Mercer Slough in the SUV got wet and their vehicle sank, but they were lucky and all emerged unscathed. Carla LaRue, spokeswoman for the Bellevue Police Department.

The women, all in their 30s and from Mexico, were driving back to the Bellevue Suites in Bellevue. They were driving around the Inland Northwest area, and were on Interstate 90 instead of east. They made a turn off Bellevue Way South and drove down the Inland Northwest boat ramp right into the water, LaRue said.

The three, who primarily speak Spanish and needed an interpreter to explain to police what happened, called 911 to say their car was floating. "They said we had seen something about being in a jungle."

Stanley Cup Final | Boston 4, Vancouver 0

UGLY OUTBURST IN B.C.

Vancouver, B.C., police try to get a handle on the mayhem that broke out downtown after the Canucks lost in Game 7 of the Stanley Cup. Disappointed fans turned over at least one vehicle and threw plastic bottles at a huge video screen mounted above the streets.

A hockey series that started with optimism in Vancouver ended in disappointment and an angry outburst, with vehicles set afire.

BY DANIEL O'NEILL

Seattle Times staff reporter

VANCOUVER, B.C. — By the time it was over, the only question was whether it was more than hearts that would be broken.

After all, 41 years of Stanley Cup finality and 100,000 fans who showed up in a few blocks of this hockey-mad city presented the distinct possibility of civic mayhem after the Vancouver Canucks' decisive 4-0 loss to the Boston Bruins in Game 7 of the championship series.

A few fireworks were ignited, a couple doors plastic bottles were hurled at the huge video-screen mounted at Georgia and Hamilton streets, and a car was overturned outside a post office and set afire.

Fans tried to tip over a second vehicle — this time a truck — but didn't do much more than break the windshield. Police and firefighters arrived to douse it within about five minutes.

The most lasting scars from this night came from the game. The Canucks lost the Stanley Cup final for the third time in their history and remain without hockey's top prize. Boston won its first Stanley
