

Symbolism

When discussing the symbolism, there are several elements present in the story. First, the eye of the old man who was killed can be seen as a symbol of distorted reality. The narrator describes it as "all a dull blue, with a hideous veil over it that chilled the very marrow in my bones" (Poe par. 9). In this case, the eye represents the guilt of the man, reminding him of his wrongful actions. Additionally, it shows the narrator's distorted perception of reality (Wang 29).

Another symbol in the story is the one of the heart. As mentioned before, the organ made the man furious, leading not only to murder but confession. The protagonist exclaims, "I felt that I must scream or die!" (Poe par. 17). This emphasizes the fact that the heart symbolizes increasing psychological torment and the presence of the old man's past life.

Conclusion

In summary, the author expertly reveals the narrator's ongoing insanity by portraying themes of guilt, madness, and death in graphic detail, along with the symbols of the heart and eye. The theme of shame and conscience is the first one. The narrator has both physical and mental suffering as a result of this sensation, which is evident throughout the novel and leaves him with nowhere to run. Poe also explores the idea of madness in further detail through his elements, highlighting the fine line that separates sane from insanity.

Lastly, the story's recurring theme of death highlights the difficulties faced by the elderly man who was killed. Regarding the symbols, one could interpret the dead man's eye as a representation of a warped reality. The story also uses the heart as a symbol. As previously stated, the organ incited the man's rage, which resulted in both murder and confession.
