Revaluing Horticultural Skills Hannah Pitt, 2024-11-29 This book highlights the value and skill of horticultural work through stories of food cultivation It examines the difficulties that arise from the perception that this type of activity is unskilled and the importance of acknowledging the expertise involved in growing food The book provides a rare focus on horticulture as a vital part of agri food systems offering a social science perspective on the sector's current and past characteristics It presents new primary research into horticultural work and workers across UK food growing using close attention to their abilities to highlight the depth of their knowledge and learning This is set in the context of global agri food regimes which press producers to seek ever more precarious labour undermining food justice By examining these in the context of internationally connected supply chains it characterises injustices which recur globally and across food system labour The conceptual argument starts from an ecological definition of skill as a social practice embedded within its socio economic landscape developing this perspective beyond its association with artisanal contexts Together the empirical and conceptual materials highlight the fallacy of discourse which tends to individualise skill and the challenges around recruitment into food production To counter this the book proposes a more collective approach to fostering healthy skills ecosystems reaching towards commoning through examples of horticultural communities seeking this in the meantime It will appeal to postgraduates researchers and professionals interested in food systems their workers and related topics of horticultural education training and human resources labour migration and politics of injustice It draws on perspectives from rural studies human geography and sociology and connects with international debates in these fields Food focused scholars and activists will find data and insights to support calls for better work in food systems

On the Dynamics of Exploited Fish Populations Raymond

J.H. Beverton, Sidney J. Holt, 2012-12-06 Among the fishes a remarkably wide range of biological adaptations to diverse habitats has evolved. As well as living in the conventional habitats of lakes, ponds, rivers, rock pools and the open sea, fish have solved the problems of life in deserts, in the deep sea, in the cold antarctic and in warm waters of high alkalinity or of low oxygen. Along with these adaptations we find the most impressive specializations of morphology, physiology and behaviour. For example we can marvel at the high speed swimming of the marlins, sailfish and warm blooded tunas, air breathing in catfish and lungfish, parental care in the mouth brooding cichlids and viviparity in many sharks and toothcarps. Moreover, fish are of considerable importance to the survival of the human species in the form of nutritious, delicious and diverse food. Rational exploitation and management of our global stocks of fishes must rely upon a detailed and precise insight of their biology. The Chapman Hall Fish and Fisheries Series aims to present timely volumes reviewing important aspects of fish biology. Most volumes will be of interest to research workers in biology, zoology, ecology and physiology, but an additional aim is for the books to be accessible to a wide spectrum of non specialist readers ranging from undergraduates and postgraduates to those with an interest in industrial and commercial aspects of fish and fisheries.
