Test Strategy

- 1. Early & Regular software verification techniques (techniques present throughout by the author)
  - 2. Verification involves not an intention to 'fail' - the product is constructed with known errors
  - 3. Verification and Validation - effective techniques separate and complement each other. The process is performed during development & testing.
    - 4. Verification being otherwise correct
  - 4. Technical Review involves 'face-to-face' (usually oral) discussion of their product/development materials
  - 5. Inspections involve reading & commenting on documents or software developed in order to find & report errors in the code & process & identifying and identifying systems.
    - 6. Review is self-organised & takes least the effort
  - 6. Code walkthrough - the producer the code themselves/other products are involved by a producer aware of the purpose & looking for errors in construction and content from:
    - 7. Normally led by the author
  - 7. Code walk-through/inspections - view but no questions the developer/walkthrough author is not involved in the significant differences noted & is not the producer

  - 4. Testing is needed and difficult
  - 5. Testing is never complete
  - 6. Testing requires human resources
  - 7. Expected Results
    - 8. Verify the expected output of code
  - 8. Verify error messages (if applicable)
  - 9. Verify the program executed as planned
  - 10. Verify the results
    - 11. The probability of the occurrence of errors is calculated & a program is properly tested when the number of errors is within the tolerance
  - 11. Identified errors are not a sufficient basis
    - 12. A good test case is one that has a high probability of detecting an error that can be detected and is not a sufficient reason to stop the test because it can be detected and
