Chapter Books Joyce Armstrong Carroll,1992 Transhumanism as a New Social Movement James Michael MacFarlane,2020-05-19 This book explores Technological Human Enhancement Advocacy through ethnographically inspired participant observation across a range of sites James Michael MacFarlane argues that such advocacy is characterized by Techno centrism a belief grounded in today s world while being also future oriented and drawn from the imagination This blurring of real and imagined futures borrows from the materialist grounding of the scientific worldview while granting extended license to visions for technology as an enabler of forward facing action which include reviving humanist ideals associated with the modernization project While Techno centrism is arguably most pronounced in transhumanism where it is acted out in extreme almost hyperbolic ways it reflects more generally held deep seeded concerns around the future of science technology and human self identity in the new millennium Far from being new these emerging social forms capture unresolved ambivalences which have long cast a shadow over late modern society and culture

The role of knowledge science and evidence in how we both conceptualize and best support children with special educational needs and other forms of diversity in the classroom remains an open question in terms of both policy and practice. Although there is a considerable and growing body of literature on evidence informed practice in education in general, there has been less attention paid to its implications for the domain of educational inclusion specifically. However, tensions between differing conceptualisations of difference and the role of categorisation present questions as yet not fully answered as to the ways in which evidence can and should articulate with practice in this specific domain. For example, issues of what is inclusion, the place of norms and values that define inclusion, how we conceptualize and think about difference across culture, language and cognition are raised when we think about the application of evidence to practice in the area of educational inclusion.

Just Get on the Pill Krystale E. Littlejohn, 2021-08-31. Understanding the social history and urgent social implications of gendered compulsory birth control: an unbalanced and unjust approach to pregnancy prevention. The average person concerned about becoming pregnant spends approximately thirty years trying to prevent conception. People largely do so alone using prescription birth control, a situation often taken for granted in the United States as natural and beneficial. In Just Get on the Pill, a keenly researched and incisive examination, Krystale Littlejohn investigates how birth control becomes a fundamentally unbalanced and gendered responsibility. She uncovers how parents, peers, partners and providers draw on narratives of male and female birth control methods to socialize cisgender women into sex and ultimately into shouldering the burden for preventing pregnancy. Littlejohn draws on extensive interviews to document this gendered compulsory birth control, a phenomenon in which people who give birth are held accountable for preventing and resolving pregnancies in gender constrained ways. She shows how this gendered approach encroaches on reproductive autonomy and poses obstacles for preventing disease. While diverse cisgender women are the focus, Littlejohn shows that they are not the only ones harmed by this dynamic. Indeed, gendered approaches to birth control also negatively impact trans, intersex and gender nonconforming people in overlooked ways. In tracing the divisive politics of pregnancy prevention, Littlejohn demonstrates that the gendered division of labor in birth control is not natural. It is unjust.
