Ethics at War Deane-Peter Baker, Rufus Black, Roger Herbert, Iain King, 2023-12-20 This book debates competing approaches to ethical decision making for members of the armed forces of liberal democratic states In this volume four prominent thinkers propose and debate competing approaches to ethical decision making for military personnel Deane Peter Baker presents and expounds the Ethical Triangulation model an ethical decision making method he has employed through much of his career as an applied military ethicist Rufus Black advocates for a natural law based approach one which has heavily influenced the framework formally adopted by the Australian Defence Force Roger Herbert outlines the Moral Deliberation Roadmap the moral reasoning framework recently adopted by the US Naval Academy Iain King then sets out a model of quasi utilitarian decision making developed in several post conflict settings and refined at the UK's Royal College of Defence Studies After the opening chapters in which each author outlines their favoured decision making approach the four contributors then evaluate each other's proposals often critically Philosopher David Whetham offers some concluding thoughts in which he summarizes areas of agreement between the authors identifies key areas of difference and suggests directions for future research This book will be of great interest to students of military ethics the ethics of war moral philosophy and International Relations as well as military professionals

The Pledge to America Drago Dzieran, 2023-06-13 As heard on The Dan Bongino Show and the Jocko Podcast One of the most powerful books I've read in a long time Dan Bongino Retired Navy SEAL Drago Dzieran takes readers behind the scenes of his incredible life from an impoverished childhood in Communist controlled Poland to his time as a political prisoner to his twenty years as a member of the United States military's most elite fighting force Everything I have I owe to America the greatest country in the world I have been fighting oppression and defending freedom my entire life When I became a United States citizen I felt it was my moral obligation to give back to this country and the people who had given me freedom I wanted to serve my new country in the best capacity I could so when the first Persian Gulf War broke out I decided to join the military During my Navy career I performed over one hundred combat direct action missions in Iraq from 2003 to 2005 My chance to live as a free man is only possible because of the ideals the founding fathers fought for and that have been carried forward to this day by Americans Every person has a voice and every voice matters I will continue to encourage others to get involved stand up and preserve and cherish the freedom and liberty we have in America Bridging the Military-civilian Divide Bruce Fleming,2010 Civilians and military personnel do not have a clear view of each other in the United States today Conspiring against such understanding are the norms and traditions of the two cultures On the one hand the military is considered to like its secrecy and think of itself as morally superior to the civilians it is meant to serve On the other hand civilians praise or blame the armed forces based on political exigencies and generally without true comprehension of their culture And their mutual misperceptions seem greater now than in the late 1960s and early 1970s during the Vietnam War Yet as U S Naval Academy professor Bruce Fleming points out the military is linked to the civilian world so fundamentally that all of us pay the price if they do not develop an appreciation of one another but that is achievable only if each side also strives to see itself clearly As the military fulfills its mission of protecting Americans and their way of life civilians must also do their part and support the military through budget allocations legislation and enlistment Without this shared commitment American interests suffer as a whole Fleming shows how to close a military civilian gap that yawns so large in twenty first century America that it potentially threatens national security and essential freedoms
