

OpenWay®

CENTRON® Model

The OpenWay system delivers a truly smart meter for the residential mass market. Iron engineers have built upon our proven CENTRON solid-state platform to deliver an advanced meter that provides a cornerstone technology for the smart grid.

Featuring open-standards architecture, modular design for flexibility in communications, and extensive features and functionality, the OpenWay CENTRON supports the most demanding smart grid business requirements today and well into the future.

A key component of any advanced metering or smart grid initiative, the OpenWay CENTRON meter is a truly smart device used to collect, process and transmit vital energy information to utility systems. Rather than simply inserting a network communication card into a standard meter, Itron developed an advanced meter where calculations and usage data are calculated within the meter itself, allowing utilities to leverage time-based rates, demand response, home networking and many other smart grid applications.

The OpenWay CENTRON system provides enhanced security and a reliable approach to data collection and communications between the meter and the network. Storage and transport of register data are provided through ANSI C12.19 and C12.22 open standards technology. In addition, each OpenWay CENTRON meter comes factory-equipped with a ZigBee® radio to provide a built-in communications pathway into the home for data presentation, load control and demand response. ZigBee also provides a communication channel with 2.4GHz OpenWay Gas Modules.

The OpenWay CENTRION also provides robust data storage capability to support time-of-use pricing, load profile data and other data-intensive applications, as well as the most advanced feature set available to support smart grid requirements. These features include full two-way communication, a load-limiting remote disconnect and reconnect switch, positive outage detection and restoration notification, voltage monitoring, automatic tamper and theft detection, as well as the ability to reprogram the meter remotely and upload new firmware via the network.

The OpenWay CENTRON meter is the smart meter for the smart grid.
