

Section Review 11-1

1. Mendel's principle of dominance states that some alleles are dominant and others are recessive. 2. A trait controlled by a dominant allele will be produced if there are two dominant alleles present or one dominant allele and one recessive allele. 3. A trait controlled by a recessive allele will be produced only when two recessive alleles are present. 4. Segregation is the process during gamete formation in which the two alleles are separated from each other so that each gamete carries only a single copy of each gene. With the pea plants, each F_1 generation plant produces two types of gametes—for example, those with the allele for tallness and those with the allele for shortness. 5. True-breeding plants allowed Mendel to pinpoint the cause of variation in traits because he could control which plants breed. Without true-breeding plants, Mendel would not have been able to draw his conclusions because there would have been too many variables. 6. Cross-pollination is the process of one plant fertilizing another, while self-pollination occurs when a plant fertilizes itself. 7. 225 plants will show the trait controlled by the recessive allele. 8. The trait controlled by the recessive allele would not have been produced in the resulting F_2 generation. Both F_1 generation plants need to have Tt allele combination for the trait controlled by the recessive allele to be produced in one of the F_2 generation plants.

Section Review 11-2

1. Probability is the likelihood that a particular event will occur. The principles of probability can be used to predict the outcomes of genetic crosses. 2. Punnett squares are used to predict and compare the genetic variations that will result from a cross. 3. The seed color controlled by the dominant allele has a 50% probability of being produced and the seed color controlled by the recessive allele has a 50% probability of being produced. Students should have 25% and Rr in the upper and lower left boxes and 25% and rr in the upper and lower right boxes of their Punnett square. 4. Homozygous plants have two identical alleles for a particular trait, TT or tt . In contrast, heterozygous plants have two different alleles for a particular trait, Tt . 5. Tt and FF are different genotypes, but both combinations will produce the same phenotype, the trait controlled by the dominant F allele. 6. TT 25% 7. Tt 25% 8. Tt 25% 9. tt 25%

8. In incomplete dominance, the heterozygous phenotype is somewhere in between the two homozygous phenotypes. In codominance, the heterozygous phenotype shows both traits. 9. Polygenic traits have more variation in phenotypes because different combinations of alleles for these genes produce many different phenotypes. 10. Morgan chose fruit flies because fruit flies are easy to keep in the lab and they reproduce quickly, producing a great number of offspring.

Meiosis produces four cells. 12. Cells resulting from mitosis have a diploid number of chromosomes and are genetically identical to each other and to the original parent cell. Cells resulting from meiosis have a haploid number of chromosomes and are genetically different from each other and the original parent cell. 13. Both products of meiosis I and II are haploid cells. Two cells result from meiosis I, and four cells result from meiosis II. 14. Gamete formation in either sex is a result of meiosis. In males, the four cells resulting from meiosis usually all become gametes. In females, however, the cytoplasm is not divided evenly, so that only one of the four cells becomes a gamete. The other cells become polar bodies, which are not used in reproduction. 15. Each daughter cell would contain 14 chromosomes.

Mitani, Josep Call, Peter M. Kappeler, Ryne A. Palombit, Joan B. Silk, 2012-10-24 In 1987 the University of Chicago Press published Primate Societies the standard reference in the field of primate behavior for an entire generation of students and scientists But in the twenty five years since its publication new theories and research techniques for studying the Primate order have been developed debated and tested forcing scientists to revise their understanding of our closest living relatives Intended as a sequel to Primate Societies The Evolution of Primate Societies compiles thirty one chapters that review the current state of knowledge regarding the behavior of nonhuman primates Chapters are written by the leading authorities in the field and organized around four major adaptive problems primates face as they strive to grow maintain themselves and reproduce in the wild The inclusion of chapters on the behavior of humans at the end of each major section represents one particularly novel aspect of the book and it will remind readers what we can learn about ourselves through research on nonhuman primates The final section highlights some of the innovative and cutting edge research designed to reveal the similarities and differences between nonhuman and human primate cognition The Evolution of Primate Societies will be every bit the landmark publication its predecessor has been Primates in Perspective Christina J. Campbell, 2007 Primates in Perspective is the first edited volume to offer a comprehensive overview of primatology since 1987 Forty four original essays by fifty nine leading researchers in the field today provide wide ranging and contemporary coverage of all of the major areas of primatology Arranged in six sections the text begins with an introduction to primatology and a review of the natural history of the major taxonomic groups within the order Primates It goes on to cover methodologies and research design for both field and captive settings primate reproduction primate ecology and conservation and their roles in the daily lives of primates and such aspects of social behavior and intelligence as communication learning and cognition The volume ends with a concluding chapter by the editors that discusses the future of primatological research Ideal for introductory primatology courses Primates in Perspective can also be used in upper division behavior and conservation courses Additionally it is an invaluable reference tool for primate researchers Motherhood in Human and Nonhuman Primates: Biosocial Determinants C. R. Pryce, R. D. Martin, D. Skuse, 1995-05-15 Within the disciplines of anthropology medicine psychology and zoology the primate mother infant relationship has been studied extensively in terms of either its evolution adaptive function causation disruption or consequences Between these disciplines however there has been only limited exchange of theory and evidence relating to the study of motherhood and this is true for human motherhood specifically and primate motherhood in general This situation needs rectifying because a clear and detailed understanding of the biosocial regulation of human motherhood is best achieved using a comparative and interdisciplinary approach Infrastructure Development and Ape Conservation
