crime and justice ,2000 The Mismeasure of Crime Clayton J. Mosher, Terance D. Miethe, Dretha M Phillips, Dretha M. Phillips, 2002-02-06 After a decade of steady decline the appearance of conflicting reports regarding crime statistics has led many to call into question the accuracy of the current methods used to compile these statistics Because the measurement of social phenomena involves human decisions inevitably errors are made This book aims to identify and examine the nature of these errors so that social scientists legislators and the general public will be able to conduct a healthy dialogue on the topic in order to remedy some of the problems Before the book goes into much contemporary detail historical measures of crime are given an overview The authors then follow with chapters on the three most common methods used to report crime Official data self report and victimization studies are analyzed in depth in order to discuss the specific errors that can occur in each type of measurement The final chapter of the book describes ways that these measures can be applied to specific situations The end result is the formation of a clearer picture of the impact these measures can have on the formation of crime prevention and control policies Measurement Problems in Criminal Justice Research National Research

Council, Division of Behavioral and Social Sciences and Education, Committee on National Statistics, Committee on Law and Justice, 2003-01-18 Most major crime in this country emanates from two major data sources The FBI's Uniform Crime Reports has collected information on crimes known to the police and arrests from local and state jurisdictions throughout the country The National Crime Victimization Survey a general population survey designed to cover the extent nature and consequences of criminal victimization has been conducted annually since the early 1970s This workshop was designed to consider similarities and differences in the methodological problems encountered by the survey and criminal justice research communities and what might be the best focus for the research community In addition to comparing and contrasting the methodological issues associated with self report surveys and official records the workshop explored methods for obtaining accurate self reports on sensitive questions about crime events estimating crime and victimization in rural counties and townships and developing unbiased prevalence and incidence rates for rate events among population subgroups
