Where Do Cities Come From and Where Are They Going To? Modelling Past and Present Agglomerations to Understand Urban Ways of Life Francesca Fulminante,John William Hanson,Scott G. Ortman,Luis M. A. Bettencourt,2021-01-25 Over the last decade there has been a surge of interest in urbanization and economic development sparked by the realization that making urban life sustainable is one of the greatest challenges facing us in the 21st century this is now one of the core sustainable development goals of the United Nations This has exerted considerable pressure on researchers to come up with more scientific ways of studying urbanism and economic activity over the long run which has resulted not only in the development of new theoretical frameworks but also in the collection of vast amounts of data from a range of settings This has led to the realization that although there are significant differences between settlements in different settings there are nonetheless important regularities and commonalities between a diverse group of settlements in range of geographical and

historical contexts including both ancient and modern ones This suggests that a common feature of settlements is their ability to generate increased social connectivity greater division of labour and specialization and enhanced technological invention and innovation albeit with costs to levels of equality quality of life and standards of living as well as impacts on the environment which cannot be separated from the emergence of confederations and states and the creation of settlement systems hierarchies and networks We believe that this field of enquiry now stands at a critical juncture Although it is now feasible to talk about many aspects of ancient and modern urbanism with relative confidence such as the numbers of cities or their sizes much of the discussion of these themes within historical and archaeological circles has been on a discursive or qualitative level while it is often difficult to harmonize the different models that have been applied to date into a consistent empirical and theoretical framework A new approach to settlements throughout different contexts should now be within our grasp however thanks to both the ease with which information can be disseminated and the facilities that recent developments in IT offer us to model analyse and statistically test data      The Shaping of Western Civilization, Volume I Michael Burger,2013-12-16 Michael Burger s goal in this inexpensive overview is to provide a brief historical narrative of Western civilization Not only does its length and price separate this text from the competition but its no frills uncluttered format and well written one authored approach make it a valuable asset for every history student The Shaping of Western Civilization From Antiquity to the Mid Eighteenth Century begins with the ancient Near East and ends with the mid eighteenth century Unlike other textbooks that pile on dates and facts Shaping is a more coherent and interpretive presentation Burger s skills as writer and synthesizer will enable students to obtain the background required to ask meaningful questions of primary sources In addition to suggestions for further reading this overview includes over 40 images and 14 maps      Connecting Ecologies Patrick Riordan,Gavin Flood,2024-06-03 Connecting Ecologies focuses on the environmental aspects of Pope Francis encyclical Laudato Si and the challenge to care for our common home It considers how best to devise and implement the new societal models needed to tackle the ecological problems facing the world today The book addresses the need for and complexity of an integral ecology one that looks not only at physical and biological processes but also allows for the contributions of theology philosophy spirituality and psychology including the implications for the human and social sciences The contributions document four categories of resonances resources requirements and responses evoked by a reading of Laudato Si and include consideration of other faith traditions They reflect on how care for our common home motivates people in different places cultures and professions to cooperate for myriad goods in common The volume is particularly relevant for scholars working in religious studies and theology with an interest in ecology the environment and the Anthropocene      The Shaping of Western Civilization Michael Burger,2013-12-16 Volume I of The Shaping of Western Civilization begins with the ancient world and ends with the Enlightenment Unlike other textbooks that pile on dates and facts Shaping is a more coherent and interpretive presentation      Document Boston (Mass.),1921

Evolving Brains, Emerging Gods E. Fuller Torrey, 2017-09-05 Religions and mythologies from around the world teach that God or gods created humans. Atheist, humanist, and materialist critics meanwhile have attempted to turn theology on its head, claiming that religion is a human invention. In this book, E. Fuller Torrey draws on cutting-edge neuroscience research to propose a startling answer to the ultimate question: Evolving Brains, Emerging Gods locates the origin of gods within the human brain, arguing that religious belief is a by-product of evolution. Based on an idea originally proposed by Charles Darwin, Torrey marshals evidence that the emergence of gods was an incidental consequence of several evolutionary factors. Using data ranging from ancient skulls and artifacts to brain imaging, primatology, and child development studies, this book traces how new cognitive abilities gave rise to new behaviors. For instance, autobiographical memory, the ability to project ourselves backward and forward in time, gave Homo sapiens a competitive advantage. However, it also led to comprehension of mortality, spurring belief in an alternative to death. Torrey details the neurobiological sequence that explains why the gods appeared when they did, connecting archaeological findings including clothing, art, farming, and urbanization to cognitive developments. This book does not dismiss belief but rather presents religious belief as an inevitable outcome of brain evolution. Providing clear and accessible explanations of evolutionary neuroscience, Evolving Brains, Emerging Gods will shed new light on the mechanics of our deepest mysteries. Climate Development and History of the North Atlantic Realm Gerold

Wefer, Wolfgang H. Berger, Karl-Ernst Behre, Eystein Jansen, 2013-03-09 The global environment is changing rapidly under the impact of human activities, and an important element of this change is related to global climate modification. Can the study of climate and history help in devising strategies for coping with this change? What might be the type of information most useful in this context? What are the pitfalls awaiting the unwary? These are the kinds of questions that led us to bring together experts from the natural and social sciences with a strong interest in history to promote discussion between workers in different disciplines by focussing on a common topic of great interest to society. The meeting was arranged in the framework of a Hanse Conference within the interdisciplinary program of the Hanse Wissenschaftskolleg, a foundation set up to promote interdisciplinary studies in collaboration between the universities of Bremen and Oldenburg. The aim of the Hanse Conferences in general is to provide opportunities for experts from different fields of the sciences and humanities to come together and explore the larger framework of topics of common interest. What unites the participants is their desire to look over the fence to neighboring disciplines. Young colleagues who wish to build an interdisciplinary career are particularly welcome. In the Hanse Conference on Climate and History, we have endeavored to build bridges between the climate sciences and the sociological sciences concerned with environmental impacts on human activities. The geological sciences we felt are especially well suited to the purpose because they already comprise historical aspects. Resources in Education, 1995
