Strong Inside A Relentless Pursuit Of Continuous Improvement:

Strong Inside- John a D'Alessandro,2014-11-17 There came a point in my life where my potential began fading dramatically My dreams and hopes seemed to be less attainable and I began silently accepting defeat With little resistance I started letting my excuses define my existence For every failure I had a reason to explain why I was quick to judge and gave less of an effort to understand At some point I had to accept more responsibility for my actions and decisions No matter the situation I came to realize that I always had a choice in the outcome or in how it could play out I could take a stand or runaway accept abuse or fight against it be selfish in my actions or helpful towards others face my fears or hide from them and lie to myself When we are young we have that crutch that supports our confidence which is called time See time is like the air we breathe we never realize how important and meaningful it is until it starts running out When it s almost gone we truly realize how important each breath and moment is It is then when we fully understand that neither should be wasted at any period in our lives Well for me time came to get real with myself I understood that I was falling short of my potential while wasting my efforts and abilities in the process I realized that I no longer had any control of my past but I needed to make a firm decision on how my future would take form What principles values and ideals did I believe in What was my idea of success and what was my game plan to make this a reality My whole life I tried to be strong yet could I display the strength needed to overcome the obstacles in my path preventing myself from true achievement I knew I had to make a choice and have a firm conviction to be STRONG INSIDE and persevere through adversity No more excuses no more reasoning and no more settling If I wanted to live a great life than I had to make a great commitment and stay strong to my beliefs

Enterprise Rules Don Young, 2013-02-07 The messages of Enterprise Rules are hugely important Organisations that manage to provide meaning to employees satisfaction to customers and a net contribution to society can expect to prosper in the long term This has been known for a long time ever since the great Quaker entrepreneurs of the 19th century but the focus of much contemporary enterprise has become distorted by an over emphasis on short term financial gains and reward without performance The result is that many value creating enterprises are undermined customers are short changed people are exploited and the community impoverished Many managers seem to have forgotten that they are mainly dependent on the skills and motivation of their staff and commitment of customers for their success Don Young draws both on the best research on what builds high performance and also on a lifetime of his and colleagues hard and sometimes comical experience of success and failure In a very readable way he has blended experience with a rich understanding of the economic financial organisational psychological contributions to building high achievement This is topped by a profound examination of the positive and negative aspects of organisational politics and drawn together in practical guidance of how to plan and implement sustainable performance improvement
