

Unit HSC 025 – The role of the health & Social care worker

Outcome 1: Understand working relationships in health and social care

1.1 Explain how a working relationship is different from a personal relationship	Working relationships are based on formal policies and procedures and agreed ways of working; these are bound by contracts of employment and have codes of practice to be followed ,working relationships are professional based. My responsibility as a support worker is to deliver very high standard services to individuals. This includes support for everyday living. For example, bathing, dressing, personal hygiene and general domestic task. When I am carrying out all these, I do remember person centred values and this helps me to be able to do what is right for the client or what the client wants. Before carrying any activities for the day, I do go through my clients care plan; follow the team meetings to get all the information about the clients and the changes. Personal relationships are based on emotions and are informal. In personal relationships you often share support between each other and feelings and thoughts as you can be who you are with family or friends. Personal relationships involve doing things together outside of work. Working with a colleague is a professional relationship. You share work related information either as part of a team or a one-to-one basis and I must follow agreed working guidelines eg. Working towards common goals. A personal relationship is that where you share a deep friendship with emotions and feelings. Also a relationship that is built of love, either romantic or that of a family bond.

Care Work, Migrant Peasant Families and Discourse of Filial Piety in China Longtao He, 2021-08-02 This book examines the experiences of migrant peasant workers in China who care for parents diagnosed with cancer and explores to what extent contextual changes after the economic reform initiated in 1978 affected practices and experiences of caring In his own attempt to develop a localized methodology the author considers identifying similarities between Chinese philosophies and Foucault's theories as the key step for localizing Foucauldian discourse analysis Three similarities are located and articulated with regard to filial care Firstly the complexity of discursive relations identified by Foucault resembles the complicated Chinese notion of the relationality of the self Secondly both sides have a tendency to look back to ancient times for solutions and to critique the notion of progress in modernity For Foucault the way to attain freedom or agency is through technologies of the self such as speaking truth parrhesia Lastly both value action and practice in their theories The book then analyzes through this localized methodological approach statements made by migrant peasant workers to take readers through their discursive mechanisms to construct filial piety in relation to their subjective care experiences

Burnout in Social Work Field Education Mary Powell, Linda Riggs Mayfield, 2024-06-24 This book informs social work students about the context and potential for burnout in their field experience their first work with clients and equips them to recognize prevent and address it With its emphasis on role ambiguity and self care based on current research the volume uniquely fills the gap in available texts and prepares them for successful professional practice with personal mental health Job burnout and self care have received attention in research and education in social work and other caring professions but social work students must successfully complete managed learning assignments in the field before they can become social workers and those experiences can put the student at risk for burnout Until very recently however student burnout has been a silent issue in the profession and the literature. With this compact book, readers learn the risks of burnout in field assignments for students and new professionals, the organizational and personal factors that contribute to it, appropriate self-care strategies to reduce its incidence, and effective coping strategies to limit its effect. Stakeholders gain understanding about burnout, incidence, prevention, and self-care that prepares them to take appropriate preventive and prescriptive action. Burnout in Social Work Field Education: Mitigating the Risk is a timely and essential resource for social work instructors, students, field interns, instructors, and supervisors. It can serve as a supplementary text to aid students in understanding what factors will increase their risk of burnout and help them identify which coping strategies are most likely to be effective based on research. It is a highly desirable complementary text for adoption in social work courses and in service education in early social work practice. The book also should interest administrators in social service agencies and presenters of in-service education opportunities for social workers and social work educators. Handbook Integrated

Care Volker Amelung, Viktoria Stein, Esther Suter, Nicholas Goodwin, Ellen Nolte, Ran Balicer, 2021-07-12. This handbook shares profound insights into the main principles and concepts of integrated care. It offers a multi-disciplinary perspective with a focus on patient orientation, efficiency, and quality by applying widely recognized management approaches to the field of healthcare. The handbook also highlights international best practices and shows how integrated care can work in various health systems. In the majority of health systems around the world, the delivery of healthcare and social care is characterised by fragmentation and complexity. Consequently, much of the recent international discussion in the fields of health policy and health management has focused on the topic of integrated care. Integrated care acknowledges the complexity of patients' needs and aims to meet them by taking into account both health and social care aspects. Changing and improving processes in a coordinated way is at the heart of this approach. The second edition offers new chapters on people-centredness, complexity, theories, and evaluation methods, additional management tools, and a wealth of experiences from different countries and localities. It is essential reading both for health policymakers seeking inspiration for legislation and for practitioners involved in the management of public health services who want to learn from good practice. Handbook of Psychopathology in Intellectual Disability Johnny L. Matson, 2024-09-19. The Second Edition of the handbook reflects the diversity of this complex subject matter, addressing its prevalence and presentation, testing methods, and treatment options. In addition to focusing on specific psychopathologies as they affect the course of intellectual disability (ID), several new chapters and significantly updated coverage span the field from in-depth analyses of psychosocial aspects of ID to promising new findings in genetics and the ongoing challenges of tailoring personalized care to meet individual client needs. Expert contributors bridge gaps between the evidence base and best practices for treating clients with ID across disciplines and discuss improved policy for maximum utility. Key areas of coverage include: Core etiological approaches in psychopathology and ID, including neuroimaging, behavioral phenotypes, and genetic syndromes; psychological and social factors; and epilepsy. Comorbid

psychopathologies e g mood anxiety bipolar and personality disorders Common clinical conditions e g ADHD autism and behavior problems Medical and psychological interventions e g psychopharmacology as well as community and inpatient services The Handbook of Psychopathology in Intellectual Disability Second Edition is an essential reference for researchers professors and graduate students as well as clinicians therapists and other scientist practitioners in developmental school and clinical child psychology psychiatry social work rehabilitation medicine public health neuropsychology and all related disciplines
