

Reg Ellery and the Establishment of Psychoanalysis in Australia

Robert Kaplan

This article looks at the establishment of psychoanalysis in Australia, focussing on the role of Melbourne psychiatrist Reginald (Reg) Ellery. Despite its great distance from Europe, interest in psychoanalysis reached Australia surprisingly early last century. Freud had established the basic principles by 1910 but then faced great opposition from many quarters in gaining acceptance. Such controversy occurred in Australia as much as anywhere, with conservative intellectuals, medicine, and much of psychiatry implacable in their opposition to its practise. Nevertheless, from the 1930s, a small group of enthusiasts, including Reg Ellery, were pushing for its acceptance, and in 1940 analytic training commenced and psychoanalysis established a firm footing in Australia. Described as a skilful clinician of enormous sophistication, Ellery promoted a view which implicitly posed a question for all doctors, putting the disease back into its environment—the patient had to be seen as a person—as relevant today as it was in his time, and the key concept in a more humanistic approach to psychotherapy.

If there is such a thing as disease of the mind, we can do nothing for it.

- Henry Maudsley.

The fierce antagonism with which the majority of Freudian ideas ha(ve) been assailed by orthodox opinion and conventional medical thought... The path of the pioneer is paved with thorns. Resentment has ever been the exhibit of lesser men.

- Reg Ellery.

Australia is half a world away from Vienna and a century ago new developments could take a long time to arrive. In the eyes of many a collection of newly federated British colonies where psychiatry (if not psychology) was barely established was not a place to take

The Prophet of Psychiatry Robert M. Kaplan, 2015-01-01 The first full length biography of a leading Australian psychiatrist who had a significant influence on the Melbourne cultural and artistic scene VD Ian Howie-Willis, 2020-09-02 Sexually transmitted diseases for centuries lumped together as Venereal Disease or VD for short have always marched in lock step with soldiers from all armies wherever they have served During the twentieth century at least 125 000 Australian soldiers contracted VD while serving in overseas deployments the equivalent of six World War I infantry divisions Until the advent of penicillin in the mid 1940s the two most common and most devastating sexually transmitted diseases were gonorrhoea and syphilis During the overseas deployments of the Australian Army during the twentieth century these two debilitating disfiguring embarrassing and potentially lethal diseases put tens of thousands of soldiers out of action for weeks at a time Gonorrhoea and syphilis weakened the Australian Army seriously reducing its operational capability These two diseases also incurred huge financial costs for Australian citizens whose taxes went into recruiting and training whole cohorts of new troops to replace those hospitalised by VD and effectively lost to the Army for months on end In addition sexually transmitted diseases imposed enormous strain on the Army's usually over stretched health services Essentially preventable and self inflicted they diverted resources that could otherwise have been devoted to treating and rehabilitating soldiers wounded in action There were social costs as well because the soldiers who contracted VD were the menfolk of Australian women The soldiers were largely inexperienced young men who were far from home and faced an uncertain future The women they left behind would have been appalled to know that the soldiers they had lovingly farewelled would spend months in hospital being treated for diseases that were so taboo they could not be discussed around the family dinner table In this honest courageous book Ian Howie Willis tells the perplexing story of how two microscopic sexually transmitted organisms Neisseria gonorrhoeae and Treponema pallidum the bacteria causing gonorrhoea and syphilis wreaked enormous havoc among Australian troops in all their wars from South Africa in 1898 1902 to Vietnam in 1962 1973 and beyond

First World War, the Universities and the Professions in Australia 1914-1939 Kate Darian-Smith, James Waghorne, 2019-02-19 Australia's extraordinary contribution to World War I extended well beyond its military forces to the expertise of its universities and professional men and women Scientists and engineers oversaw the manufacture of munitions and the development of chemical weapons Doctors sustained soldiers in the trenches and treated the physically and psychologically damaged Public servants lawyers and translators were employed in the war bureaucracy while artists and writers found new modes to convey the trauma of war The graduates and staff of Australia's six universities Sydney Melbourne Adelaide Tasmania Queensland and Western Australia and Queensland were involved in this expansion of expertise But what did these men and women do after the guns were silenced How were the professions and universities transformed by the immediate and longer term impacts of the war The First World War the Universities and the Professions examines how the technical and conceptual advances that occurred during World War I transformed Australian society It traces the evolving role of universities and their graduates in the 1920s and 1930s the increasing government validation of research the expansion of the public service and the rise of modern professional associations and international networks While the war contributed to greater specialisations in traditional professions such as teaching or medicine it also stimulated new jobs and training whether in economics anthropology or graphic art This volume provides a new account of the interwar years that places knowledge and expertise at the heart of the Australian story Its four sections The Medical Sciences Science and Technology Humanities Social Sciences and Teaching and The Arts Design Music and Writing highlight how World War I disrupted and shaped the careers of individuals as well as the development of Australian society and institutions
