

Unit 6, Lesson 3B

Activity 1

Understanding Aggregate Demand

Aggregate demand consists of four components: the demand for goods and services from consumers, from business and government, from foreign countries, and from the rest of the world. It represents all the demand in the economy.

When prices are low, demand is high. When prices are high, demand is low. This is the law of demand. The price level is the average of all prices in the economy. It is a good measure of the cost of living. It is also a good measure of the demand for goods and services. It is the sum of all the demand for goods and services in the economy.

The demand curve is a graph that shows the relationship between the price level and the quantity of goods and services demanded. It is a downward-sloping curve. It shows that as the price level falls, the quantity demanded increases.
