Cowart,2018-07-05 We stand to learn much about the durability of or changes in the American way of life from writers such as Bharati Mukherjee born in India Ursula Hegi born in Germany Jerzy Kosinski born in Poland Jamaica Kincaid born in Antigua Cristina Garcia born in Cuba Edwidge Danticat born in Haiti Wendy Law Yone born in Burma Myl ne Dressler born in the Netherlands Lan Cao born in Vietnam and such Korean born authors as Chang rae Lee Theresa Hak Kyung Cha and Nora Okja Keller writers who in recent years have come to this country and in their work contributed to its culture David Cowart In Trailing Clouds David Cowart offers fresh insights into contemporary American literature by exploring novels and short stories published since 1970 by immigrant writers Balancing historical and social context with close readings of selected works Cowart explores the major themes raised in immigrant writing the acquisition of language the dual identity of the immigrant the place of the homeland and the nature of citizenship Cowart suggests that the attention to first generation writers those whose parents immigrated has not prepared us to read the fresher stories of those more recent arrivals whose immigrant experience has been more direct and unmediated Highlighting the nuanced reflection in immigrant fiction of a nation that is ever more diverse and multicultural Cowart argues that readers can learn much about the changes in the American way of life from writers who have come to this country embraced its culture and penned substantial literary work in English

The Rhymer Douglas Thompson, 2014-05-02 The Rhymer an Heredyssey by Douglas Thompson defies classification in any one literary genre A satire on contemporary society particularly the art world it is also a comic poetic meditation on the nature of life death and morality A mysterious tramp wanders from town to town taking a new name and identity from whoever he encounters first Apparently amnesiac or even brain damaged Nadith Learmot nonetheless has other means to access the past and perhaps even the future upon his chest a dial down his sleeves wires that he can connect to the walls of old buildings from which he believes he can read their ghosts like imprints on tape Haunting him constantly is the resemblance he apparently bears to his supposed brother a successful artist called Zenir Setting out to pursue Zenir and denounce or blackmail him out of spite in his travels around the satellite towns and suburbs surrounding a city called Urbis Nadith finds he is always two steps behind a figure as enigmatic and polyfaceted as himself But through second hand snippets of news he increasingly learns of how his brother's fortunes are waning while his own to his surprise are on the rise Along the way he encounters unexpected clues to his own true identity how he came to lose his memory and acquire his strange contraption When Nadith finally catches up with Zenir what will they make of each other Told entirely in the first person in a rhythmic stream of lyricism Nadith's story reads like Shakespeare on acid leaving the reader to guess at what truth lies behind his madness Is Nadith a mental health patient or a conman or as he himself comes to believe the reincarnation of the thirteenth century Scottish seer True Thomas The Rhymer a man who never lied nor died but disappeared one day to return to the realm of the faeries who had first given him his clairvoyant gifts
