

UNIT 1 STUDY GUIDE:

1. What is Direct Democracy? How is it used in the United States today? Why is this type of democracy controversial?

Direct Democracy is a form of government where most of the citizens of a place are directly involved in the running of a place (city, state, nation). It is mostly found in recalls and propositions. It is controversial because 1. The nation is very large and it is impossible for every citizen to be directly involved. 2. Many citizens are not well informed or educated therefore not being able to make right decisions.

2. What is Representative Democracy? How is it used in the United States today? Why would this type of government be considered "safe" for all citizens?

Representative democracy is a form of government where the people elect leaders who then make decisions reflecting the will of the people. It is used today in that way we elect local and state officials to represent us and make decisions for the benefit of us. It is considered "safe" for all citizens because the minority groups are protected just as much as majority groups.

3. Explain the basics of each of the following theories of government: Marxist, Elitist, Bureaucratic, and Pluralist. Which is closest to the U.S. system and why?

The Marxist theory says that elitists (capitalists and big business) run the government. The Elitist theory says that leaders outside the government, corporate leaders and military leaders, run the government. The Bureaucratic theory says that appointed officials and bureaucrats are in control of the government. The pluralist theory says that any public party with and interest affects public policy. This theory is the closest to our system in the US because the government is affected by at least two major parties. The government is controlled by multiple factors such as corporations, military leaders states and cities.

4. What were the Articles of Confederation? Why did this government fail (be specific)? What did these failures lead to?

The Articles of Confederation was the first form of government the United States had. It failed due to the fact that the states had too much power, making it very difficult for national government to govern or have any power. The states were divided. These failures led to downfall of the Articles and the creation of Constitution we have today.
