Improving Working Memory in Learning and Intellectual Disabilities Silvia Lanfranchi,Barbara Carretti,2016-08-05 The last forty years of research have demonstrated that working memory WM is a key concept for understanding higher order cognition To give an example WM is involved in reading comprehension problem solving and reasoning but also in a number of everyday life activities It has a clear role in the case of atypical development too For instance numerous studies have shown an impairment in WM in individuals with learning disabilities LD or intellectual disabilities ID and several researchers have hypothesized that this can be linked to their difficulties in learning cognition and everyday life The latest challenge in the field concerns the trainability of WM If it is a construct central to our understanding of cognition in typical and atypical development then specific intervention to sustain WM performance might also promote changes in cognitive processes associated with WM The idea that WM can be modified is debated however partly because of the theoretical implications of this view and partly due to the generally contradictory results obtained so far In fact most studies converge in demonstrating specific effects of WM training i e improvements in the trained tasks but few transfer effects to allied cognitive processes are generally reported It is worth noting that any maintenance effects when investigated are even more meagre In addition a number of methodological concerns have been raised in relation to the use of 1 single tasks to assess the effects of a training program 2 WM tasks differing from those used in the training to assess the effects of WM training and 3 passive control groups These and other crucial issues have so far prevented any conclusions from being drawn on the efficacy of WM training Bearing in mind that the opportunity to train WM could have a huge impact in the educational and clinical settings it seems fundamentally important to shed more light on the limits and potential of this line of research The aim of the research discussed here is to generate new evidence on the feasibility of training WM in individuals with LD and ID There are several questions that could be raised in this field For a start can WM be trained in this population Are there some aspects of WM that can be trained more easily than others Can a WM training reduce the impact of LD and ID on learning outcomes and on everyday living What kind of training program is best suited to the promotion of such changes

Psychosocial Risk Factors in the Development, Maintenance and Treatment Outcome of Eating Disorders Matteo Aloï, Antonino Carcione, Giovanni Castellini, Gianluca Lo Coco, Marianna Rania, Cristina Segura-Garcia, Karin Waldherr, 2024-09-25 Eating disorders EDs are mental disorders characterized by altered eating habits and excessive concerns about weight and body shape They arise mainly during adolescence and predominantly affect females The three most common types of EDs are Anorexia nervosa AN which is characterized by restriction of food intake significant low body weight an intense fear of gaining weight and disturbances in body shape and weight experience Bulimia nervosa BN which is characterized by recurrent binge eating episodes followed by behaviors that compensate for the overeating i e self induced vomiting excessive exercise or extreme use of laxatives enemas or diuretics and self evaluation based on body shape and weight Binge eating disorder BED which is characterized by the recurrence of binge eating episodes without the use of compensatory behaviors for weight control and feelings of distress embarrassment and guilt To date researchers and clinicians agree that a multifactorial model is the most suitable for explaining the onset and maintenance of EDs For example a risk factor for BED may be lower parental care as it may trigger greater confusion and uncertainty in responding to unpleasant emotional experiences This contributes to an impaired personality development more severe psychopathological symptomatology and greater difficulty in both identifying and distinguishing feelings of hunger and satiety from other emotions Attachment styles have also been explored in patients with EDs According to the attachment theory attachment insecurity could disrupt the ability to identify and express emotional states and might impair affect regulation skills i e emotional dysregulation Within the two main dimensions of attachment insecurity i.e attachment anxiety and avoidance higher attachment anxiety is related to greater symptom severity in patients with AN and BN Moreover prior studies have examined impaired emotional competences ECs theory of mind ToM and metacognition which refer to how individuals identify express understand regulate and use their emotions or those of significant others These skills may also explain why attachment insecurity places individuals at greater risk of EDs Although particular personality traits i.e impulsivity perfectionism self esteem attachment styles trauma and metacognition clearly play a role in the onset and maintenance of EDs little is known about their associations and underlying mechanisms

Ortega, Alexander Gómez-A, Lucas Cuenya, Javier Leonardo Rico, 2020-05-11 Latin America has increased its share of world scientific publications by nearly twofold during the last two decades approximately from 2 to 4% Despite this positive trend the scholarly impact of scientific research produced in the region measured in terms of citation rate remains low Two interrelated factors that contribute to this situation is that most research groups tend to work in isolation or in local sporadic collaboration and results are often published in journals that are not indexed in major citation databases e.g SCOPUS or Web of Science Ultimately part of Latin American high quality research seems to remain hidden from the rest of the world Over the last decades an important number of Latin American scientists have developed fruitful research agendas on questions on learning and emotion focusing on basic and or translational research with humans and other animal models and implementing diverse methodologies Notwithstanding the important contributions of these research programs Latin American research on emotion and learning has followed the overall trend of other research fields throughout the region namely remaining partially hidden from the large scientific community of the world This Research Topic aimed to engage researchers from Latin America to share their empirical and conceptual work on learning and emotion Ultimately this effort was expected to strengthen and integrate our regional community of experts enhance global networking and establish new challenges and developments for future investigation
