

The Industrial Revolution: The Transformation of Society

- A. What is meant by the Industrial Revolution? Define the term.
 - a. It refers to a shift from an agrarian society, handcraft, labor intensive economy to one dominated by machine manufacture powered by fossil fuels.
- B. Why did the Industrial Revolution take place first in Great Britain?
 - B. They were willing to leave the old farming methods and didn't have any internal tariffs. The British had a labor pool of handworking skilled farmers who couldn't earn a living for their families on the land. Had a history of coal and iron production. There was a climate of law, order, and protection of private property.
- C. How did the population explosion and the agricultural revolution contribute to industrialization?
 - C. The population explosion contributed by supporting people to work in factories. The agricultural revolution supplied food for the people which populated Europe.
- D. What was the social cost of industrialization? Describe the life and working conditions of early factory and mine workers? Had they been better off as peasant farmers?

D. Identify and give the significance of the following:

- 1. The Agricultural Revolution- agriculture more a capitalist enterprise, raised food for market, peasants could join the ranks of the entrepreneurs, changes in landholding, soil usage, and animal husbandry, selective breeding more widespread, improved reapers, horse-drawn rakes, and threshers.
- 2. Enclosure- underdeveloped land was brought under cultivation, and common land used for grazing animals was claimed as private property, generally by great landowners, whose political power gave them an advantage.
- 3. Factory System- workers are trained to do specific jobs, worker trends to the machine.
- 4. Eli Whitney- developed the cotton gin in 1793. This removed the seeds from raw cotton quickly and cheaply, leading farmers and plantation owners to devote more land to cotton production.
