

- Do I think I can still associate with the people connected with my addiction? Can I still go to the places where I used? Do I think it's wise to keep drugs or paraphernalia around, just to "remind myself" or test my recovery? If so, why?
- Is there something I think I can't get through clean, some event that might happen that will be so painful that I'll have to use to survive the hurt?
- Do I think that with some amount of clean time, or with different life circumstances, I'd be able to control my using?
- What reservations am I still holding on to?

Surrender

There's a huge difference between resignation and surrender. Resignation is what we feel when we've realized we're addicts but haven't yet accepted recovery as the solution to our problem. Many of us found ourselves at this point long before coming to Narcotics Anonymous. We may have thought that it was our destiny to be addicts, to live and die in our addiction. Surrender, on the other hand, is what happens after we've accepted the First Step as something that is true for us and have accepted that recovery is the solution. We don't want our lives to be the way they have been. We don't want to keep feeling the way we've been feeling.

- What am I afraid of about the concept of surrender, if anything? What convinces me that I can't use successfully anymore?
- Do I accept that I'll never regain control, even after a long period of abstinence?
- Can I begin my recovery without a complete surrender?
- What would my life be like if I surrendered completely?
- Can I continue my recovery without complete surrender?

Spiritual Principles

In the First Step, we will focus on honesty, open-mindedness, willingness, humility, and acceptance.

The practice of the principle of honesty from the First Step starts with admitting the truth about our addiction, and continues with the practice of honesty on a daily basis. When we say "I'm an addict" in a meeting, it may be the first truly honest thing we've said in a long time. We begin to be able to be honest with ourselves and, consequently, with other people.

- If I've been thinking about using or acting out on my addiction in some other way, have I shared it with my sponsor or told anyone else?
- Have I stayed in touch with the reality of my disease, no matter how long I've had freedom from active addiction?
