1. What is the difference between technical and non-technical academic language?

- Technical academic language: Words related to specific subjects, like sovereignty, monarchy, tyranny
- Non-technical academic language: Words that run across multiple disciplines, such as theory, hypothesis, analysis

2. What is vocabulary instruction, how to teach it, assess it, and differentiate instruction for it?

- What is it? Vocabulary is the set of words and phrases that a student is able to use and understand
- How to teach it? Use Contextual Redefinition
 - Teacher displays text passage that highlights to-be-taught vocabulary
 - Students independently read the passage and write what they think the meaning of the vocabulary words are. If students don't know, they write, I don't know.
 - Students move into small groups of three, share their definitions of the words, and each student is free to change or update their definition
 - Teacher moves instruction back to whole-group, and asks for volunteer students to read their definitions
 - Teacher listens to students and writes definition of the word on the board and the students copy it into their word journals
- How to assess it? Use standardized vocabulary test
 - Tests should use vocab words in context and have multiple choice options
- How to differentiate vocabulary instruction:
 - For struggling readers:
 - Focus on key vocabulary and nontechnical academic language
 - Reteach what is not mastered
 - Provide concrete examples
 - Use visual, kinesthetic, and tactile activities
