

Solutions To Gang Violence In Society

Gang Violence Gang violence happens almost all over the world, mostly in big cities and the lower class places, also known as the ghetto. Lots of people dislike each other over stupid reasons. That's how all this gang violence happened and got out of hand. Gang violence includes murder, kidnapping, robbery, and drug dealing. Ways to prevent this is to increase police officers, provide programs, and create more strict laws. Gang violence is one of the largest issues in the United States.

Criminal street gangs are groups, clubs or organizations that acts together to commit gang crimes. This makes other people (individuals) to commit a gang crime also. Gang crimes includes murder, maiming, manslaughter, kidnapping, arson, and robbery, assault with dangerous weapons, carjacking, and distribution, stealing money, and setting off fire alarms. You may wonder why people would even want to join gangs. People join gangs for various reasons. If we understand why people are joining gangs we can do more to help stop them.

Most children are raised around gang infested areas. They grow into that thinking it's the best way to live. Either family members or people they go to school with are in gangs. Everyone around is involved so they end up being involved also. Many gang members are kids who have not succeeded in school. They think that they have nothing to look forward to or they do not feel good about themselves. Gangs use children because they know that whatever the child under thirteen does, he or she cannot go to jail.

Some people believe that the reason young people join gangs is a lack of support from their parents or guardians and encouragement in their families and schools. The government thinks more community programs are needed to prevent this problem. Children and teenagers view gangs as families that provide protection and acceptance; they feel as if they have nothing to lose if they go to jail. Many teens or young adults that attend a program against gang violence influenced them to either leave their gang life or avoid it and now have families, jobs, and careers.

Still they can be police targets just for having been gang members in the past, living around them, or having tattoos. Here are a few ways to prevent gang violence in our community: caring, active, trusting and respectful adults in the lives of a lot of the youth even though most are overworked or tired and often poor. It will also take creative engagement, although most of the time creative programs are first to be cut out during a financial crisis. Jobs that won't judge a person's splats and schools that is small enough for the adults to care for each child.

Television programs also cause violence. All children see violent acts committed on television programs, films, videos, news broadcasts, and cartoons. Many children imitate the violent they see

Phillips,2012-06-29 In 2003 an FBI led task force known as Operation Fly Trap attempted to dismantle a significant drug network in two Bloods controlled African American neighborhoods in Los Angeles The operation would soon be considered an enormous success noted for the precision with which the task force targeted and removed gang members otherwise entrenched in larger communities In Operation Fly Trap Susan A Phillips questions both the success of this operation and the methods used to conduct it Based on in depth ethnographic research with Fly Trap participants Phillips's work brings together police narratives crime statistics gang cultural histories and extensive public policy analysis to examine the relationship between state persecution and the genesis of violent social systems Crucial to Phillips's contribution is the presentation of the voices and perspectives of both the people living in impoverished communities and the agents that police them Phillips positions law enforcement surveillance and suppression as a critical point of contact between citizen and state She tracks the bureaucratic workings of police and FBI agencies and the language ideologies and methods that prevail within them and shows how gangs have adapted seeking out new locations learning to operate without hierarchies and moving their activities more deeply underground Additionally she shows how the targeted efforts of task forces such as Fly Trap wreak sweeping sustained damage on family members and the community at large Balancing her roles as even handed reporter and public scholar Phillips presents multiple flaws within the US criminal justice system and builds a powerful argument that many law enforcement policies in fact nurture rather than prevent violence in American society
